A PATRIOTIC OLD FASHIONED CELEBRATION.

Woodstock, Conn., July 4.—[Special.]—They met in a dripping rain, but in numbers that would have filled Music Hall to overflowing, and they cheered the President of the United States as he never was cheered before in this section. Farmers, mechanics, merchants, professional men, and their wives and children, the young men and the old men, the veterans of the Union army and the veterans of the Confederate army, were represented in the crowd that gathered in the public square of this town to welcome the President. Democrats and Republicans were there in equal numbers, and the cheers that greeted the President were inspired by a feeling of pride in the fact that the people of Connecticut, Democratic and Republican alike, had united in giving him a welcome that was worthy of the occasion.

The President was met at the railroad station by a committee of citizens, and escorted to the carriage in which he was driven to the public square. Here he was received by the crowd with cheers and waving of handkerchiefs. Then the President, Governor Bulkeley, Senator Platt, Senator Hawley, Congressman Hall, and the other members of the Connecticut party were escorted to the platform, which was erected in front of the Universalist church. Here the President was welcomed by Mr. Bowen, who introduced to the people of Woodstock the party, consisting of the President, Governor Bulkeley, Senator Platt, Senator Hawley, Congressman Hall, and the other members of the party. The President was received with cheers and waving of handkerchiefs by the ladies and children who filled the windows and doors of the houses that overlook the square. Then the President was escorted to the platform, and was introduced by Governor Bulkeley to the crowd that had gathered to hear him.

Governor Bulkeley said: "I think I speak the sentiments of everybody present when I say that we are honored in the presence of the President and most distinguished guests who are with him to-day. It would be presumption on my part to say that the President is welcome to Connecticut, for he has been welcomed by the people of the whole country wherever he has been. I will not detain you longer, but will introduce to you the President of the United States."

The President, on coming forward, was received with cheers and waving of handkerchiefs. He said:

Governor Bulkeley, Senator Platt, Senator Hawley, Senator Hall, Mr. Bowen, Mr. Chairman, and Fellow Citizens: I am very grateful for the cordial welcome which you have given me to-day. I am grateful for the kindness of the committee which met me at the railroad station and escorted me to the platform. I am grateful for the kindness of the gentlemen who have addressed me, and I am grateful for the kindness of the ladies and gentlemen who have assembled to-day to welcome me to Woodstock. I am grateful for the kindness of the children who have come out to see me. I am grateful for the kindness of the veterans of the Union army and the veterans of the Confederate army who have assembled to-day to welcome me to Woodstock

The Governor of Alabama has called upon the sub officers to invoke the Supreme Court's fight upon the secret act of Alabama. The Governor of Mississippi has notified the officers of that State that the fight must be prosecuted. The Governor of Louisiana has issued his usual solemn proclamation, enjoining the contestants they must not fight on Louisiana soil. Meanwhile the preparations for the fight go merrily on and with as much unconcern as if Queen Victoria simply had called in a triumph of State authority of days it. By the side of the Governor's proclamation on the front page of Sun Chicago was made glorious setting forth the puerile attempt to use the fight upon parties to that city not more than July 7, on the occasion. Only going to the issue of the document will have Ford O'Connor early on the morning of July 5. But really Morris, Hollins, Elvins & Co. have the sense that no right Northerners and but one to succeed who happens to be South.

HIS DIFFERENCE ABOUT STRAUS.

Congressman "Jimmy" Cox was the editor of the Jay at Davis, South Dakota, and never and made a the citizens, which the Dakotans must have greatly enjoyed. He genuinely enough to forward the liberty of the country after of the Statistical Book the loss of the Louisiana purchase, but the state's partisan servitude prevented him to lend nobler the part taken in that transaction by Thomas Jefferson. He placed Jefferson above Washington and claimed for the gentleman sagacity in respect to the future development of the West. And He Can!

Under of our correspondents writes here to... [illegible] ...Straus, and that the Democratic Congressman from this district will support him. [illegible] ...Democrats will be glad to know that the Hon. Adlai Stevenson has declared himself in favor of the appointment of Mr. Straus

LITTLE GOOD WORK IN THE FIELD.

Chicago Helps Washington to Tie Them Up in the Box.

Chicago played two games with Washington yesterday, winning both, the opening game going to the credit of Austin 6-5, after a contest which brought to the home enthusiastic spectators the strenuous game being true to the name both after every brand of good ball batting and suspense between two of leading men except the big event in baseball circles.

Washington being a newcomer in the race, everybody expected Chicago to win, and so did the Nationals. Nevertheless previous to the game being the Nationals bothered the ex-pennant fellows to secure hits, the visitors being unable to connect with Callahan's curves in the afternoon, although assists and fielding both.

Washington has been playing fine ball, and so has Chicago, but both aggregations were off color in the morning game, the Nationals getting the jump on the locals in the first inning by scoring two runs. Chicago tied the score in the fifth, but Washington got another run in the seventh, and Chicago could not overcome the lead.

Callahan was in the box for the visitors, and pitched a good game, but was hit hard in the pinches. Patterson was in the box for Chicago, and was touched up for seven hits, but pitched a steady game, and was given good support.

The second game was a pitchers' battle, Austin and Tannehill being in the box, and neither allowed a run to be scored. Austin was given a little better support than Tannehill, and this was the deciding factor.

Two errors gave Washington a run in the first inning, and Chicago could not overcome the lead. Austin pitched a steady game, and was given good support.

Chicago got its first hit in the sixth inning, and two runs were scored in the seventh. Washington scored one run in the eighth, and Chicago could not overcome the lead.
